MIDDLE TENN. FARM NEWS

Prepared Exclusively for the Chronicle by Division of Extension, College of Agriculture, University of Tennessee,
Knoxville.

Three states are waging one great campaign to increase the acreage of legumes for they realize that farm profits will decrease thereby. These states are Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi.

Working together in this campaign are the United States Department of Agriculture, state department of agriculture, college of agriculture, divisions of extension, state and county boards of education, farmers' organizations, farm bureaus of Memphis and Little Rock, banker's organizations, business men's organizations, merchants, agricultural departments of all the railroads, rural churches and women's clubs.

Will you get behind this great movement? Now is the time to plant legumes. If you cannot plant acres, plant at least a small plot and save your own seed for next year's planting. It will pay.

Plant some legumes this month and encourage others to do likewise.

GET CRIMSON CLOVER STARTED

Plans should be well under way for that crimson clover crop. No other annual winter legume and certainly no other crop of other kinds will do for the soils of Tennessee what crimson clover will do.

Crimson clover is a winter crop that may be used as pasture, winter cover, hay and green manure. It is harder than red clover and so is a superior plant for late fall and winter pasture and for turning under in the spring.

Do you know how to get a good stand of red clover? The same soil preparation will insure a good stand of crimson clover. Crimson clover reaches its highest usefulness on summer worked land free from a growing crop. There are other ways to prepare the land but none so good as this. Methods of soil preparation are discussed in Publication 18 recently issued by the Division of Extension, Knoxville, Tennessee. The publication will be sent without cost to you if you write for it.

MAKE THE SEED BED READY

Legumes especially require that the seed bed be in good condition and since many persons will be putting crimson clover or other legumes on their farms this month it is well to bear in mind what will bring the best results.

Legumes must be planted shallow and on firm soil—never deep or in loose soil. They welcome a light blanket of loose soil with moist, firm earth below. This condition is obtained by sowing upon rolled—not merely dragged—land and covering with a light harrow, weeder or bush.

HOW MUCH SEED TO USE

The rate of seeding per acre is for crimson clover—hulled seed, 18 pounds; unhulled seed, 30 pounds; for bur clover—cleaned seed, 15 pound; seed in bulk, 40 pounds; for red clover, 12 pounds; for alsike clover, 8 pounds; for alfalfa, 25 pounds, for sweet clover, 20 pounds, for vetch, 30 pounds.

MAKING YOUR FAIR BETTER

Counties all over Tennessee are planning for summer and fall fairs. Most of these fairs will bring to a place where citizens of the county may see them the best live stock of the county. Some fairs will have on exhibition live stock from other places.

To get the best idea of the stock and to make the work of the judges satisfactory to themselves and to the community this live stock must be properly classified. How is it to be done? By using the classification list which is followed at state and national shows. This list has been arranged for the use for Tennessee fair managers and farmers and will be sent to any one asking for it.

If this classification list is followed the live stock at your fair will show up to the best advantage.

"THE EYE OF THE MASTER"

The old English saying that "the eye of the master fatteneth the cattle" is very true today. But what does it mean? Certainly it means more than the use of the master's judgment at the time of feeding. It means that, but it means more.

The "eye of the master" as well tells whether his stock is of the kind that will bring in the greatest profits.

The eye of the master will see that the bull used in his herd, no matter how large that herd may be, is one that will improve the herd. He will see that the animals are healthy and that their surroundings are sanitary.

Watchfulness at the feed troughs will then give the results that are desired.

DON'T WASH THE EGGS

Allowing eggs to get soiled and then washing them is bad for the market condition of the eggs. Eggs that have been washed do not keep as well as eggs that are marketed from the nest.

The best plan to follow is to keep the house and its surroundings clean so that the eggs will rarely get dirty. The market asks for clean eggs, but it is bad to wash them to make them so.

The best way to get clean eggs is to put new straw in the nests each week. Keep a deep litter of straw on the floor of the house and gather the eggs at least twice daily. Keep eggs covered from flies in dark, cool rooms.

PROTECT YOURSELF

Protect yourself. Yes, and your neighbor, too! Keep yourself in good health and you will do both. Once in a while you will hear someone say that he does not mind a cold much and that his child has had a slight attack of measles but is well now. Every time a person is sick his body is left that much weaker to resist other diseases later on. This is the way the men who study disease explain it.

Each human body has a number of cells in the blood whose business it is to protect the body against disease. They are naturally fighters and will do all they can to kill disease germs when they enter the human system.

The cells are victorious when they are stronger than the germs, and they are stronger when they are natural. But if some disease that is called mild, such as measles, whooping cough, colds, etc., attack a person, extreme care must be exercised or the disease will leave the body's fighting cells weaker. When the more dreaded disease comes along they are not able to overcome it and then the person gets tuberculosis, typhoid fever, small pox or some other dangerous sickness.

The weaker the fighting cells the more chance for sickness. Keep your fighting "blood" up by taking care of yourself. How to do so will be discussed in this column from week to week.

GRAND CANYON

More Than a Mile Deep and 8 to 10 Miles Wide

Few persons can realize on a first view of the Grand Canyon that it is more than a mile deep and from 8 to 10 miles wide.

The cliffs descending to its depth form a succession of huge steps, each 30 to 50 feet high, with steep rocky slopes between. The cliffs are the edges of hard beds of limestone or sandstone; the intervening slopes mark the outcrops of softer beds.

This series of beds is more than 3,600 feet thick, and the beds lie nearly horizontal. Far down in the canyon is a broad shelf caused by the hard sandstone at the base of this series, deeply trenched by a narrow inner canyon cut a thousand feet or more into the underlying "granite."

The rocks vary in color from white and buff to red and pale green. They present a marvelous variety of picturesque forms, mostly on a titanic scale, fashioned mainly by erosion by running water, the agent which has excavated the canyon.—U. S. Geological Survey.

POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE.

Things seem to be moving at the Tennessee Polytechnic Institute just now. Several members of the faculty are already on the ground and are clearing the way for a hearty reception for the students. Every one expresses the confidence that a large enrollment will be made.

No boy or girl in this section who can enter should miss the chance to be among the first to enroll. The opportunity of a liberal education has been brought to our doors and every one who is eligible as a student should take advantage of it. The faculty and the people of Cookeville will do everything possible for the comfort, safety and advancement of those who come.

The opening of the school has been postponed from the 4th to the 14th of September to give time to complete the buildings and perfect arrangements for the initial opening.

Watch the papers for further information. XX
